WATER POLICE COURT.

The bench in the Chamber Court was occupied on Saturday morning by Messrs. Scott and V. Brown.

James Calian, on remand, was charged with assaulting Walter James Callan, his own son, aged 9 years. The wife of the prisoner, who is married to the said son, did not testify, notwithstanding that she had five children, prisoners, who lived in the house, over gave her anything to maintain herself or them. On the day her son was assaulted she took a knife out of prisoner's pocket, which she used to stab him in the back, and was proved to have done something with it," saying to his threats and violent conduct, both to her and to the children. Having occasion to leave home, she went out, prisoner and the boy being in the house. On returning some time afterwards she found the poor little fellow almost motionless and battered about from head to foot. Prisoner had beaten him in a brutal manner with the broom-handle because, as he said, he had taken the knife out of his pocket. The boy's arm has been broken. The prisoner was committed to the gaol for six months, the bench said that they felt bound to impose the highest

The following day prisoner was found to have left before 5 o'clock in the morning, and the jewelry was stolen.

There has been laid before the British Parliament another volume of the "Captures by Brigands," the latest edition of the work which has been published by the British India office since 1820. There is no doubt that the work is one of the most valuable and interesting of the kind, and it is a pity that it is not more generally known. The work is a collection of the most interesting and valuable information regarding the brigands of the world, and it is a pity that it is not more generally known. The work is a collection of the most interesting and valuable information regarding the brigands of the world, and it is a pity that it is not more generally known.

one of brigade took place in Mexico, two in Italy, and two in Greece, four in Spain, one in Sicily, and two in Turkey. The first captive was Mr. William Robbins, who was taken in Sicily in 1860. He was released in 1864, after a detention lasted about three weeks, and at the end of his detention he received $2,000 dollars as ransom. His captors estimated; $2,000 would be the sum demanded for his ransom, but he was released the day following his capture without any payment, his guards being under the impression that he was a spy. The second captive was Mr. and Mrs. William Moens, the Rev. J. C. M. Aynsley, and Mrs. Aynsley, were taken near Battaglia, Italy, early in May, 1863. The ladies were released the same day, and Mrs. Aynsley, of the day following. The ransom for the men was $25,000. Negotiations carried on by the British Consul at Naples and the friends of the captives, at a cost of $44,100 to the former, and $208,000 to the latter, resulted in the release of the captives.

John Harvey, the Hon. H. C. Striub, and Mr. Coore are the last victims; they were taken in Arromania, Greece, on December 8, 1898, and on the same day the two first were hanged in order to obtain ransom money. The third was paid the 16th of Jan. Mr. Coore was taken at once at theillery. Mr. John D. Mirrins was taken prisoner near Trapatto, in Mexico, on November 15, 1898, by an armed band claiming to be a portion of the Liberal forces of the Government. He was kept in prison for five days, and then, and was only detained about four days. In each of the above instances the ransom were paid by the captives, and no repayment or compensation was made by the Government of the respective countries when the captives were released. The first victim was John D. Mirrins, Mr. John Francis Furber was captured near Guazmatlan, Mexico, and on the following day his body was found with an explanation attached to it that he had been murdered for having refused to pay ransom. ing of Lord and Lady Muncaster, Mr. E. H. C. Herbert, Mr. F. G. Vyner, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd and child, were captured by Greek brigades near the bridges of Giannitsa. The ransom sum of £20,000 was demanded from them. The £50,000 was first demanded for ransom, but this afterwards reduced to £25,000 and an amnesty. Lady Muncaster and Mrs. Lloyd and child were released through the intervention of the British Government on the 19th, to arrange about the ransom. The English and Italian Ministers opened correspondence with the brigands, and the negotiations were afterwards carried on by Mr. Wyndham, representative of the British Government, and by Mr. de Bunsen, representative of the Italian Government. On the 21st April, Mr. Herbert, Mr. Vyner, and Mr. Lloyd were ransomed; but in this case the King of Greece gave Mr. Lloyd £10,000 for his immediate wants, and the Greek Government afterwards sent him £10,000 more. On the 26th April, Anthony Boswell was captured in Spanish territory near Gibraltar, on 21st May, 1870. The sum of 27,000 dollars was demanded and accepted by the Governor of Gibraltar.

behold the injury done to the firm by suspension of their business, and they claimed 126,000 lire (about $8000) from the Italian Government. Neither in this instance, however, or in either of the three previous cases, was any compensation or compensation ever made. The two last cases mentioned are those of Colonel Sygne and Mr. and Mrs. Suter and child. In both these instances the amounts—about $33,000 and $10,000—were paid, but the first case, that of the Italian, was not advanced by the British Government, but the case was marked "not concluded."

nities. Allowance must be made for the immense difference in the density of population in any comparison of the magnitude and cost of the postal business of the two countries.

Taking the correspondence first, Mr. Fawcett reports a total of 1587 million letters, post cards, newspapers, and packets, delivered in the United Kingdom within the year, "showing an average of 46 per head of the population." Mr. SUTTON takes for his measure the extent of his transactions the number posted within the colony during the year, which gives him a total, in round numbers, of 34 millions, letters, newspapers, parcels, and post cards all included. That is an average of 47½ per head of the mean population of the island, or, put more fully, but remarkably near to that of the free press in the United Kingdom. It is only fair to assume that the correspondence should of the export trade. That was the rate of £20 per head in the United Kingdom and of £41 in New South Wales. There were 1,441 people of this colony are doing twice as much trade per head with the outside world as their English cousins, but with a proportionate economy of correspondence. The total number of telegrams forwarded during the year was 26,547,137 for the United Kingdom and 3,319,535 in New South Wales, or 77 for every 1,000 inhabitants in the former, and 138 in the latter. The cost more than 10 per cent. advantage to the colony of New South Wales. The economy order transactions reached the number of 17,307,573, covering a value of £26,371,020 in Mr. Fawcett's office, and £121,011 for a value of £740,676 in Mr. Serron's, including payments on foreign orders in both cases. That gives one order for every two persons in the United Kingdom at an average value of £1 10s. 6d., and seven and for every 100 persons at an average of £100 in New South Wales. That is some-measure of the relative circumstances of the people; and here also New South Wales has a twofold advantage. The Post Office Savings Banks held £32,012,134 to the credit of 1,988,477, or an average of £16 2s in England, and £89,496 to the credit of 24,602 depositors, giving an average of £3

 16s. 9d. in New South Wales. Taken in proportion to the total population, England had one depositor for every 175 persons; and New South Wales one for every 10 persons, so that nearly the mother country has 17 times as many depositors. Although the balance will incline the other way if the New South Wales Savings Bank in Barrack-street be put down as a Government institution, as it is in reality and probably soon will be nominally as well. The post-office annuities and life insurance business done was comparatively small in England, and in this colony has yet

In one part of his report Mr. Fawcett has a paragraph referring to the working of the telephone. He says, "The telephone has been brought prominently before the public during the year by two companies, whose object it is to establish what are called telephone exchanges. These exchanges are central offices, from which wires extend to the offices of subscribers, and they are intended to afford a small amount of convenient communication between persons at different points of communication which the Post Office has introduced. The Department is satisfied that the systems of these companies constitute an infringement of the monopoly of transmitting public telegrams which was conferred on the Postmaster-General, and steps have been taken to protect his rights which in this respect I hold is already learnt the sense of the proceedings. The public has been able to escape their monopoly, and thereby they are placed under a still more stringent moral obligation to give the public the full benefit of Mr. Edison's invention at the lowest charge consistent with a self-supporting service. Whether the Government of New South Wales intend to appropriate the new idea, or leave it to private enterprise, has not yet been commanded. They have facilities for it, such as no private companies can possess, and it might well be economically to the telephone department, at great saving of money to the public, compared with the cost of establishing a separate telephone service. It only remains to compare the revenue and expenditure of the two departments, and here the contrast is striking. The English mail and money order service cost £2,090,750 for the year, and yielded a gross revenue

£5,584,415, giving a profit of £2,491,225, after without re-kening postal work performed by the Government and the revenue of the value of 100,000 telegrams at the rate of 1s. 6d. per word earned £1,452,480, giving a net income of £330,042; leaving out work done for other departments, without pay, to the value of £15,382. Putting the whole together, there is a total expenditure of £5,172,305, and a revenue of £8,070,934, which left the British exchequer a gain of £2,898,629 upon the postal and telegraph business of the year, besides getting nothing for nothing, on account of other Government departments, valued at £124,431. In Mr. Sutton's report, the money order and "savings" bank business is treated as self-supporting, with neither profit nor loss to the State, although in reality the money orders usually leave a departmental loss, and the savings' bank deposits must be the source of considerable profit if well employed by the Post Office.

The postal business itself cost £2,138,198, and returned a revenue of £114,747,888, a saving of £112,610,000. The telegraphs cost £174,717, and returned a revenue of £284,410, and that leaves a loss of £230,807.

Then it must be remembered that while in England the postal and telegraph services are charged with the entire cost of building and plant, in this colony the Minister of Works, and sometimes loan funds, are charged with the capital expenditure, leaving the services to bear little beyond the cost of maintenance. The total capital cost of telegraphic communication throughout the colony of the communications of last year was £463,325, which adds £23,000 more to the actual loss as assessed by Mr. Sturton's department for last year, besides the interest on an indefinite amount of capital sunk in post-office buildings. To what extent the Post Office gains or loses by transacting the business of other Government departments does not appear, but the last Appropriation Act contains an item of £12,000 under the head "postage of public departments," and another item of £12,000 for the transmission of telegraphic messages. Five years ago Mr. McCall, the Commissioner for Railways, complained that "we are carrying her MAJESTY's mails

V. R. C. MEETING.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.)

MELBOURNE, SUNDAY.

Although the weather was bitterly cold and showery on Saturday morning, and the tracks heavy, a lot of useful work was done by the regular attendants. The New Zealand horses are being driven along, and some are sure to run a good race. For Derby, Mr. Doherty has a pair in good form, but I do not think he is close enough, and doubt if he will get a place. I caught Spinningdale doing a rattling good gallop, which has raised her so much in my estimation that I think she will be one of the hardest to beat in the Derby. The Duke is not so firm; but, as Hales has gone to Ballarat to ride a trial, which will be witnessed by somebody, I hope to be able to tell you readers the result of my next communication. Some of the very first favourites at 2 to 1 (taken), and his immediate friends appear to think that the Derby is in his mercy. Monmouth continues to improve, and if he can stay the distance may give us a surprise. Of the Marlborough Plate candidates, Serephos, Mistake, Prince George, Fryingpan, and Morpheus are in about the best form. Serephos is too stout, and I doubt if he can be good enough; but Navigator, by Robinson Cruces from Coventry, has been doing a very satisfactory work. Williamson thinks I begin to think he will lower the colours of most of the favourites. Bathurst is going particularly well, and his gallop appears to have the best of Monmouth and Martindale. Trumpy and Crowe are in capital form, and promise to play a prominent part in the Cup, in which Duchess is still a better favourite than anything. Sweetheart is in grand condition, and as he has received the support of his party, must be very dangerous. Old Trick is doing a very good race, and is one of the most dangerous outsiders for the Cup. Up to the present no movement has been made in favour of Wandering Jew, but if Mr. De Moutre shows a sign he is likely to hold a prominent place in the market. Somerset is very firm for the Derby, and since Mr. Long's arrival Trumpy is hardening for the Cup. The Adelaide horses are looking very well, but I must see more of them before venturing an opinion as to their prospects.

THE HOBARTWORTH GARDEN CUP.—The second contest for this trophy was commenced on Saturday afternoon, on the Hobartworth ground, between the teams of the Alberts and Warwick. The attendance of spectators was not large, and the weather though fine was somewhat cold. The Warwick team, who were supposed to be weak, went in first and made an excellent start, and in the end won the last wicket for being 229. Of this number Rugg contributed 60 runs, and played an excellent innings all through. The Alberts were not so successful, and in the end were defeated by 10 runs. The Warwick team played a very good game, and the Alberts were not so successful. The Warwick team played a very good game, and the Alberts were not so successful.
